Take the time to get to know your local Republican candidates and office holders. They share your values.

REPUBLICAN MIKE ANDERSON FOR DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Mike Anderson has served thirty years in Harris County law enforcement as both a prosecutor and a District Court judge. One of his top priorities is to re-establish the credibility of the Harris County District Attorney's office.

Anderson says, "The public trust must be restored. Toward that end, my policy as District Attorney will be to seek justice while following the law."

Anderson's Democrat opponent says that victims of domestic abuse should "just get boxing lessons."

REPUBLICAN ROBERT TALTON FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY

Talton's service as a policeman, prosecutor, city attorney, judge and 16-year State Representative has prepared him to hold the critical position of Harris County Attorney.

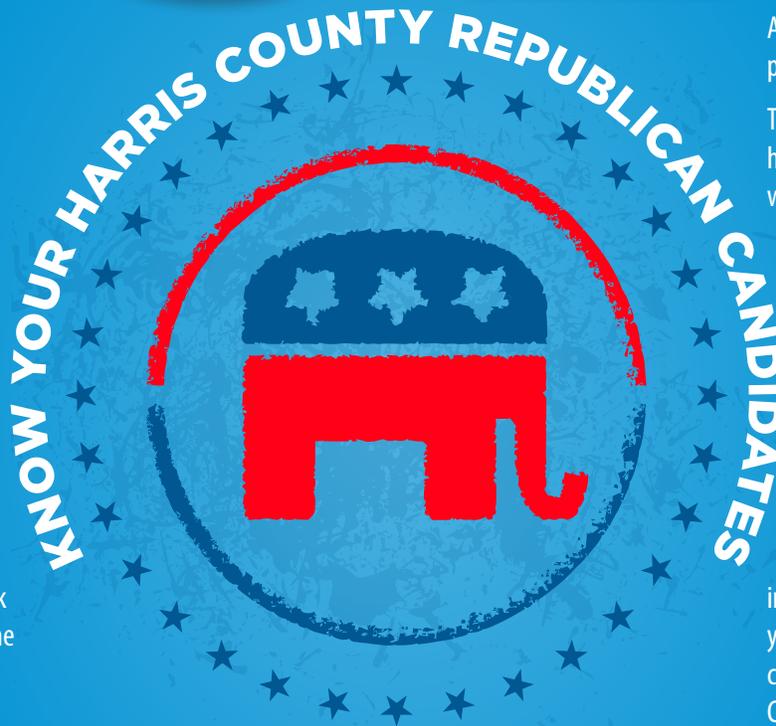

Talton says, "As Harris County Attorney, I will serve with honesty and integrity, upholding the highest ethical standards at all times. Harris County deserves a County Attorney who will investigate wrongdoing by public officials and, if wrongdoing is found, file for their removal from office. As Harris County Attorney, I will show no partiality to any person or political party."

The current Democrat County Attorney has refused to act upon any alleged wrongdoing by any public official in Harris County. In fact, he is under actual investigation for refusing to do so.

A native Houstonian, Mike Sullivan has served Harris County in many capacities over the last 15 years (including over four years as a conservative member of the Houston City Council). In addition, he has owned a small business for almost 35 years.

Sullivan says, "As Harris County Tax Assessor-Collector, I will bring the office into the 21st century by embracing new technology, clean up the voter rolls to ensure only legally registered voters are allowed to vote and improve customer service and outreach to the community, especially for our seniors and military."

The Democrat candidate for this race will undo all of the conservative reforms and efforts from past conservative Tax Assessor-Collectors like Paul Bettencourt.

Louis joined the Harris County Sheriff's Office in 1991. Working his way through the ranks to Watch Commander, Louis received multiple commendations for investigative work and community service. He earned The 100 Club's "Officer of the Year" award and the National Sheriffs' Association "Medal of Merit" for life saving.

Guthrie says, "As a law enforcement officer, I have worked to make our streets safer. As Sheriff, I'll crack down on crime and recruit the best officers to protect our communities. I'm running for Sheriff because I know we can make Harris County a safer place to live."

From welcoming the radical media outlet, Al-Jazeera, to tour the Sheriff's facility, to the discovery of employee misconduct in the jails, the current Democrat's administration has been plagued by one scandal after another.
